ROCKET

The Optimist

EDITED BY

THE CLASS OF 1918

SEPTEMBER FIRST, 1918

FOREWORD.....

In 1918 the first yearbook staff of Mayville High School published the "Optimist" with the intention of creating a record which would permit students to relive and to enjoy again their many happy high school experiences. The yearbook staff of 1956 kept this idea foremost as this yearbook was planned and published and sincerely hope that this goal may be achieved.

1956 ROCKET

MAYVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

Mayville, Wisconsin

D E D I C A T I O N

Ronald Whitford's ability as a teacher and coach in addition to his friendly interest in the students has gained for him the respect of the entire student body.

Because of this distinction in your field we, the Class of 1956, proudly dedicate this ROCKET to you, Mr. Whitford.

ADMINISTRATION AND FACULTY

SUPERINTENDENT

MESSAGE TO SENIORS:

As you approach the close of your senior year pleasant memories mingle with anticipation. You have done well through these past years. Your future holds opportunity, challenge, and responsibility. Make the most of opportunity for good, accept the challenge to progress and responsibility will rest on the broad shoulders of ability.

The last crimson curtain of twilight

Has slowly begun to close

On the first stage of life's experience,

Projecting to destiny chose.

But the first gilded streaks of morning

Will present another show.

Life will be how you play it,

The future is ours, let's go!

CLASS PROPHECY

It's the year 1966, and this is Judy Miller, commentator for Monitor, the program that goes places and sees things. This week we are going to highlight the class of 1956 of Mayville High School.

First, Monitor takes you to Chester Field, one of the largest airports in the country. While waiting for the plane to come in, we see a group of people surrounding that great international figure, Earl Hildebrandt. Earl is taking off on the first leg of his journey around the world as good-will Ambassador of the United States. He is accompanied by his secretary, Grace Hildebrandt. With a great roar, the plane we have been waiting for arrives. The pilot waves from the cockpit, and we see that it is none other than Pat Schultz. We board the plane and are welcomed by the stewardesses, Caroline Heldt and Gloria Walters. We are seated in the plane. Across the aisle are four intelligent looking women. At second glance we see that they are Doris Lechner, Geraldine Breslow, Emily Roll, and Marlene Bauer. They tell us that they are teachers traveling to the international teachers' convention in Paris.

Upon arriving in Paris, we immediately go to a large art gallery where four world famous artists are putting on a show. They are Sandra Justman, Barbara Kohli, Shirley Lau, and Barbara Wiley.

We board our plane again, bound for the United States. Hearing some subdued shouting from the front of the plane, we see five servicemen on their way home. Upon looking closer, we see that they are Bob Drozd, Don Engmann, Leon Krapfl, Tom Mertig, and Ron Schellpfeffer.

Getting off the plane, we spy three very excited women. They are Phyliss Berg, Therese Oechsner, and Beverly Steger. They are all boarding planes to meet their husbands, who are stationed in different parts of the country.

Now, Monitor takes us to Indianapolis and the famous speedway. Upon arriving, we stop to talk to the famous designer of cars, Tom Faase. He tells us that Shirley Bahe has just been acclaimed the champion woman stock-car racer of the world. After the races, we talk to Jerry Gassner and Claude Vollmer, two of the best motorcyclists in the world.

From Indianapolis, Monitor travels to a typical TV show, The Grenadiers. Near the entrance of the studio we meet two members of the Grenadiers, Erwin Gassner and Ron Zingler. We enter the studio just as the show is starting. Acting as our genial Master of Ceremonies is Francis Herman. He introduces the sensational singer, Rosie Becker. She calls herself the "Mountain Music Gal." After her number, Francis announces a special news bulletin. Researchers for the man on the farm have found a new device for curling pig's tails. The men who have done the work are Paul Budahn, Ralph Fink, Don Franke, Don Wallendal, and Jim Pionkowski.

Next, Monitor takes us to a panel show on cooking. The panel members are those well-known cooks, Dianne Sheridan, Donna Hill, Lucy Steinbach, and Kathleen Adelmeyer. They are going to discuss the problems connected with keeping from crying when slicing onions so the people would know it was a cooking demonstration and not a soap opera.

Monitor now goes on an interesting walk down a street. We see, standing upon their soap boxes, two of the popular women politicians of the day, Dolores Collien and Naomi Justman. They are campaigning against their favorite rival, Dan Weinberger. Poor Dan, he doesn't stand a chance.

CLASS PROPHECY

A few blocks down the street, we see a small white church. Stepping inside, we see that Bob Wierer is in the middle of his service. We sit down to listen, and at the end of the sermon, we hear a selection by the talented organist, Joyce Zimmerman.

Walking on down the street, we see a very interesting pair. They seem to be coming from some sort of expedition. Upon interviewing them, we find that they are Norman Giese and Jerry Kemmel, who have been prospecting for uranium.

Monitor now takes us to a professional football game. We see Lynn Cundy, Ozzie Cikanek, Bob Heim, Dennis Michael, and Dick Pichotta forming one of the most powerful teams in the country. Looking into the grandstand, we see a large group of small boys running to and fro. We also see Bob Dorst, their high school coach, trying to keep track of his little champions. Coming down the aisle we see a man waving his arms wildly. It's John Gitzinger, attired in bright green, his favorite color. John is the president of the First River Bank. He is accompanied by his secretaries, Elaine Kadolph and Jean Pappenfuss.

From the football game, we go to the miserable slum area of Chicago. We see a huge excavating project with Jerry Ayers, Ken Schalinski, Tom Guse, and Carlton Wells supervising. They are four of the country's leading engineers. Watching the work are Joyce Poppenfuss, JoAnn Hauptert, and Dena-jean Radlund. They are social workers who are talking to the man behind the slum cleaning campaign, Lester Schuman. We also see Bev Bernard, a roving reporter. Someone screams and we see that one of the workers has fallen into the pit. Within seconds a screech of tires is heard, and we see Diane Wild and Elaine Oechsner, nurses, getting out of the ambulance. They are accompanied by their driver, Maynard Loehrke. The nurses determine that the man will be all right after he is given a shot of the new wonder drug, Pyrodelamine with XB-124. It has been discovered by that master chemist Richard Koepsel.

Monitor now takes us to a style show in the fashionable section of New York. We go backstage where we are greeted by the receptionist, Bernice Hoepner. We meet Dolores Greiner and Betty Lou Keller. They inform us that they are beauticians who have just finished working on the models. We find that the models are Nancy Marrese, Delores Plansky, and Gina Schellpfeffer. After the show we talk to the three designers, Ila Mae Fischer, Frances Hechimovich, and Jane Grosenick.

Monitor is proud to be able to take us to Carnegie Hall in New York. We enter and find that a large crowd has gathered to hear the talented new star of the opera, Kay Mueller. Her accompanist is Ruth Forster.

From Carnegie Hall, Monitor travels on to the fabulous nightspot, The Black Homberg. We are greeted at the door by that well-known personage, the owner and host, Jack Hurlbert. We proceed to the checkroom where we see Irene and JoAnn Kahlhamer busily counting their tips while mixing up the hats. We enter in time to hear the popular new blues singer, Diane Amend, finish her number. Upon looking around we see Shirley Krahn the charming hostess, flitting from table to table. The room darkens, and the spotlight shines on the newly-discovered comedian, Glenn Gnerlich. After spending some time in the club, Monitor retires after a very interesting and eventful weekend.
